Making a Difference

More than a dozen undergrads in the Public Health Major have been canvassing Seattle neighborhoods to give seniors information on fire safety. The students partnered with the Seattle

Fire Department and King County Emergency Medical Services for their capstone project -- a course taught by Deb Hinchey (HServ) that requires 50 hours of individual community service. "We have gone out nearly every other weekend (sometimes with Seattle firefighters) and knocked on doors of residents over 65 years old," says senior Alexandria Mann (pictured, center). "These records are gained from voting precinct data. If the seniors are willing to let us in, the firefighters install smoke and CO alarms while we teach them how to do CPR and call 911." The students' efforts -- and this photo -- were featured in a recent Seattle Fire Department newsletter. At left is Senior Aileen Isakharov.
