At the University of Washington’s Master of Health Administration (MHA) Program, we believe in transforming health care through effective leadership and management. The field of Health Services Administration works to improve patient care and community health by effectively managing the financial, medical, and operational resources of health care organizations.

Graduates from our MHA and Executive MHA Programs fill a wide variety of health administration roles, including junior, mid-level, and senior management; administrative fellowships; business development and project management; process management and improvement; clinical program evaluation and quality management; and policy development, analysis, and evaluation.

Highlights
The Master of Health Administration Program is accredited by the Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Management Education (CAHME) and is consistently ranked by US News and World Report as one of the top 10 programs in the nation. We have built a reputation for our unique focus on leadership development, our competency-based curriculum, and our expert faculty.

Our graduates are in high demand, and we consistently see high job-placement rates for our graduates. In 2012, 100 percent of our MHA Program graduates were placed within 3 months of graduation, and over the last 5 years, the average placement rate was 94 percent.
