DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH SERVICES
ONLINE EXECUTIVE MASTER OF PUBLIC HEALTH

For more than 30 years, the Online Executive Master of Public Health has helped working professionals earn an advanced degree in public health while continuing their careers. This two-year, primarily online program will equip you to take a leadership role in tackling current and future public health challenges and promoting health equity and social justice.

HIGHLIGHTS
The Online Executive MPH program is designed to fit the busy schedules of professionals, so you can continue to work while you earn your degree. With the exception of six on-campus sessions, classes are offered online, giving you the flexibility to study largely where and when you want.

The program is taught by passionate, outstanding faculty from the UW School of Public Health, which is ranked among the top 10 schools of public health in the nation by U.S. News and World Report. The program is also fully accredited by the Council on Education for Public Health (CEPH).

Through our cutting-edge curriculum, you will build a solid foundation in biostatistics, epidemiology, environmental health, health management and policy, and social and behavioral health. At the same time, you will develop skills in population health, program development and evaluation, health promotion and education, evidence-based research, and global health. You will also get a chance to develop specialized expertise via the practicum and your culminating capstone or thesis project.

Our program uses a team-based learning approach that leverages the talents and diverse professional experiences of each cohort. Through online discussions, group projects and on-site meetings, you will interact and collaborate closely with a diverse network of accomplished public health professionals from organizations across the country.

APPLICANT QUALIFICATIONS
Our program is designed for working professionals who want to become leaders in public health. Applicants should have at least two years of professional experience. Our applicants come from diverse professional backgrounds, including health care, public health, law, social services, urban planning, nonprofit administration, business, technology, and other sectors. A baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university is required, with a grade-point average of 3.0 for the last 90 quarter/60 semester hours.

At the University of Washington, diversity is integral to excellence. All qualified applicants will receive consideration without regard to race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, age, protected veteran or disabled status, or genetic information.

ACADEMIC/PROFESSIONAL OPPORTUNITIES
After earning your MPH degree, you will be connected to our talented community of alumni. Our graduates are leaders in academia, government, health care, non-profit organizations, and industry. Professions include directors and managers of public health agencies locally and globally; faculty members; research scientists and coordinators; managers in health care organizations; epidemiologists; health education specialists; and laboratory managers, among other positions.
