Making a Difference

Nintendo probably never envisioned its Wii Fit balance board being used to improve truck driver safety. But that is what master's student Molly Halverson (DEOHS), pictured, is doing. One of the main causes of acute injuries in trucking is falls, she says. Previous studies show a significant difference in truck-driver balance before and after an eight-hour shift. Halverson has been researching what type of seat reduces a driver's imbalance and the risk of falling when exiting the truck cab. She and her colleagues validated the use of the balance board with the more expensive force plate used by industry to see if the board can be used in larger-scale studies at much lower cost.
