SPH in the News

Climate change will be hazardous to your health - Wired; quotes Howard Frumkin (OD, DEOHS)

The Rainier Ave. problem: speeding crashes, pedestrian fatalities - Crosscut; cites research by COPHP students

Revamping doctor’s orders: quality care at lower cost - Seattle Times; quotes Jeff Harris (HServ)

Keep kids moving for points and prizes in fitness programs - The Herald; cites the Northwest Center for Public Health Practice.

Recently Awarded Grants & Contracts

SPH Holiday Party

Don’t miss the School’s annual holiday celebration at 3:30 pm Wednesday, Dec. 17, at the South Campus Center (Room 316). All students, faculty, staff, family and friends are invited.

Opportunities

Check out the SPH job listings page for national and local public health jobs and opportunities.

Missed an issue of NewsCatcher? Find it in the Archive (UW netID required).

Catherine Karr (DEOHS) has received a $2.5 million grant to reduce the exposure of children in agricultural settings to substances that trigger asthma. The project will be managed by Lisa Younglove (MPH, DEOHS '04), who recently joined the staff of the Pacific Northwest Agricultural Safety and Health Center.

Patricia Atwater (HServ, MPH '13), UW Tobacco Studies program coordinator, was featured in a Daily article about her successful attempts to quit smoking. Abigail Halperin (HServ) and Colin Maloney (MPH '14) are quoted.

PhD student Heather Fowler (DEOHS), a veterinarian, volunteers to treat pets of homeless and low-income people at free Union Gospel Mission clinics. She appeared in a photo story in the Seattle Times.

Sent to you twice monthly by the Office of the Dean, University of Washington School of Public Health

View this email in your browser
Unsubscribe or change your subscription preferences