SPEAKERS

EMMA SPICKARD (BS, 2019)

Legislative Assistant to Washington State Representative Liz Berry

Ms. Spickard graduated from the Public Health-Global Health major at the School of Public Health in 2019. She was a recipient of the UW President's Medal, the highest honor awarded every year to two graduating seniors, and she also received a UW Bonderman Fellowship on which she traveled solo through South America and Southeast Asia for eight months.

Spickard was in the competitive Public Health Honors program, where students take a deep dive into public health and global health topics. She completed the program in conjunction with the Interdisciplinary track of the University Honors program, which engages students in critical thinking beyond silos.

Committed to changing the narrative around homelessness, Spickard partnered with nonprofit Real Change's advocacy arm as a student. Her work included facilitating community conversations around a proposed plan to redevelop unused Army land in Seattle into affordable housing. Spickard also helped to organize a panel to prepare UW students to take part in Legislative Education Day, when public health advocates convene in Olympia to educate lawmakers about the importance of public health funding.

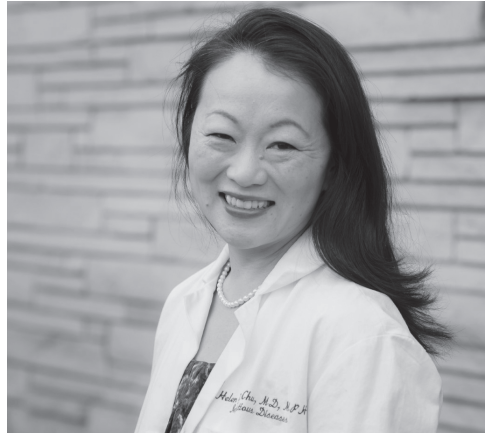

The passion for bridging public health and politics led Spickard to work as a campaign manager before bringing that same commitment into her work for the Washington House of Representatives.

HELEN CHU (MPH, 2012)

Associate Professor of Medicine at the UW School of Medicine and Attending Physician at Harborview Medical Center

Dr. Chu is a physician, immunologist and infectious disease specialist who received her MPH from the Department of Epidemiology in the School of Public Health in 2012. Dr. Chu is at the heart of Seattle's response to the COVID-19 pandemic. She co-leads the Seattle Flu Study, which had been collecting nasal swabs from Puget Sound-area residents with flu-like symptoms for months before the novel coronavirus responsible for COVID-19 turned up in the United States. The flu study lab identified the first known U.S. case of community transmission of COVID-19, and their results ultimately accelerated public health efforts to track the spread of the virus in Seattle and to mitigate the emerging pandemic.

Dr. Chu has also led various studies to understand the disease and how the body might overcome it, including an assessment of remdesivir (an antiviral medication) as a treatment for COVID-19 and a look at ways to prevent transmission among vulnerable groups such as those who are houseless. In partnership with the UW, Dr. Chu and the flu study team are leading the Husky Coronavirus Testing Program to help keep the UW's main Seattle campus safe during the pandemic. Her lab is also working to identify strategies for pandemic preparedness and to develop scalable platforms that can be rapidly deployed for current and future pandemics. In honor of all her work in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, Dr. Chu was named Washingtonian of the Year.

Dr. Chu earned her MD at Duke University. She is board certified in both internal medicine and infectious disease.

JEFFREY LEEK (MS, 2005; PHD, 2007)

Professor of Biostatistics and Oncology at the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health

Dr. Leek is an innovative data scientist and educator who received his MS and PhD from the Department of Biostatistics at the School of Public Health in 2005 and 2007, respectively. His work has had far-reaching impacts on molecular biology, cancer research and neuroscience.

Dr. Leek is co-director of the Johns Hopkins Data Science Lab, which seeks to understand variation in human gene expression and how it relates to normal development and disease. His group develops statistical methods, software, data resources and data analyses that help people make sense of massive-scale genomic and biomedical data. Dr. Leek is also helping to create a new field that studies the ways people use and understand data, which has important implications for the spread of false information on social media and the reliability of published data.

He is committed to making data science accessible to students and people in a variety of professions around the world. Dr. Leek has developed and taught several massive online open courses that have provided affordable statistics instruction to more than 8 million students globally. Most recently, he has been partnering with community-based organizations to teach data science in underserved communities as a path to economic and public health development.

Dr. Leek is best known for his contributions to genomic data analysis and critical review of research and the accuracy of popular statistical methods. He is a fellow of the American Statistical Association and a recipient of the Mortimer Spiegelman Award.

AWARDS

OUTSTANDING STUDENT AWARDS

Each department and interdisciplinary program selects outstanding students at the master's and doctoral levels. The department of Environmental & Occupational Health Sciences and the programs in Health Informatics & Health Information Management, Nutritional Sciences and Public Health-Global Health also select outstanding undergraduate students. Outstanding students excel in scholarship and have demonstrated a commitment to the field of public health. Other characteristics include creativity, intellectual curiosity, dedicated work ethic, exemplary research capabilities and the ability to be a team player.

Biostatistics

Wenbo Zhang, Master's

OUTSTANDING TEACHING ASSISTANT AWARD

This award honors a teaching assistant who excels in facilitating student learning, demonstrates excellent teaching abilities and provides important administrative assistance. The recipient in this category is knowledgeable and enthusiastic about subject material and excels in classroom communication – offering individual assistance to students as needed.

Sarah Philo, Doctoral, Environmental & Occupational Health Sciences

STUDENT COMMUNITY SERVICE AWARD

The recipient of this Student Community Service Award shows dedication and commitment to community service and volunteerism by building bridges between the School and the community. While being actively involved in a community service activity, the student contributes to and learns from the communities and individuals they serve.

Evalynn Romano, MPH, Global Health

GILBERT S. OMENN AWARD FOR ACADEMIC EXCELLENCE

These prestigious School-wide honors are awarded to one doctoral student and one master's student, each nominated by their departments. The awards recognize outstanding achievement by graduate students in the School of Public Health who excel in scholarship and have demonstrated a commitment to the field of public health.

“Indigenous voices and values are often overlooked when it comes to thinking about health-, sustainability- and social justice-related issues. I think the field of nutrition provides the space and opportunity to uplift and learn from Indigenous voices and improve health outcomes together, through our shared connections to food as human beings.”

This booklet is not an official graduation list. While every effort is made to ensure accuracy, printing deadlines may result in the omission of some names and the inadvertent inclusion of others who have not completed graduation requirements as intended. This printed booklet should not be used to determine a student's academic or degree status.

The University's official registry for conferred degrees is the student's permanent record, maintained by the UW Office of Graduation and Academic Records.
