

EXECUTIVE MASTER OF HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

The Executive Master of Health Administration program at the University of Washington equips health services professionals with the business and management skills to advance into leadership roles and help their organization deliver better patient care.

At the UW, we know business of health care. You'll earn your degree from one of the best health administration programs in the nation. We're consistently ranked one of the top MHA programs in the United States by US News & World Report.

The UW Executive Master of Health Administration program is designed for mid-career professionals in health services who are interested in entering a health care management role or in cultivating their management skills for their current position. Ideal candidates have at least seven years of clinical or administrative experience, with some exposure to management responsibilities or leadership.
